SUPPORT

The primary goal of ICB services is to make meaningful connections to get riders from rural communities to urban transportation hubs and the broader national transportation system. These meaningful connections require partnering with various elements of the state transportation infrastructure and local communities.

As a regional transportation provider, consider supporting ICB travel by allowing access to your facilities and other resources. Partnering with additional transportation providers and community stakeholders will help to make “meaningful connections” across Pennsylvania.

ABOUT

ROUTES

Pennsylvania's Intercity Bus (ICB) program operates 10 routes with numerous stops serving multiple travel corridors across the state, including connections with Amtrak, various airports and local transit systems. The two operators are Fullington Trailways and Greyhound Lines, Inc. The goal of the program is to ensure that rural communities are connected to city transportation centers. Common riders on the buses are older travelers, college students and anyone wanting to avoid high fuel costs associated with car travel.
